Caught web-handed in Berlin

Narcissism. Montreal police say accused fugitive's obsession with himself on the web led to his downfall

Fugitive suspected killer Luka Rocco Magnotta was surfing Internet sites, reading about himself when police arrested him Monday afternoon at a little cybercafé in Berlin.

"OK, you've got me," Magnotta, 29, told police after first giving a false name, Berlin Police spokesman Thomas Neuendorf said.

"He gave up without resistance" around 1:30 p.m. at the Helin Tele-und Internetcafé, Neuendorf said. The area of south Berlin is home to many Turkish and Lebanese immigrants.

Magnotta, whom European media have dubbed the "Canadian Psycho," was taken to a prison cell, where he will remain until his extradition to Canada, Neuendorf said.

"He was identified exactly," Montreal police spokesman Ian Lafreniere said at an afternoon news conference that Magnotta's fingerprints matched his Interpol profile.

How long the extradition will take isn't yet clear, Lafreniere said.

Kadir Anlayisli, who works at the Internet café on Karl Marx Strasse in the Neukolln district of Berlin, spotted Magnotta, the subject of an international manhunt, when he walked in.

Anlayisli, 42, told a Turkish-language newspaper in Germany that he recognized Magnotta. He flagged down a police car and several officers converged on the shop.

Magnotta had been the subject of an international manhunt for the gruesome killing and dismemberment Jun Lin, 33, a Chinese student at Montreal's Concordia University. Lin's torso was found in a suitcase left for garbage collection outside Magnotta's Montreal apartment last week. Other severed body parts, including a hand and a foot, were mailed to the offices of the federal Conservatives and Liberals. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Premier leaving room for sales tax hike: Tories

Premier Greg Selinger says he has no plans to raise the provincial sales tax, but on Monday stopped short of ruling it out.

"We have no plans to do it and we said we wouldn't. The reality is our broad objective is to keep Manitoba one of the most affordable places to live," he said after question period.

A hike in the PST would require a referendum. Asked if he would change the law to do away with that requirement, Selinger again used the phrase "no plans" and alluded to future fiscal challenges.

The Opposition Tories repeatedly asked Selinger during question period whether he plans to raise the seven per cent PST.

Some business and labour groups are calling for the sales tax to be raised to eight per cent to fund infrastructure projects. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stadium could be delayed again

Sorry, Winnipeg Blue Bombers season ticket holders, but you might have to spend a few extra games at Canad Inns Stadium this season.

Officials say progress on Investors Group Field has run into challenges over the past few weeks and construction will be evaluated again this week.

Stuart Olson Construction said last week's winds and heavy rains delayed building. Wind has caused several problems for Investors Group Field, including a small concession wall being blown over when wind speed hit 85 kilometres an hour last month. The delays have pushed back the opening game at the new stadium to Sept. 21 instead of a July date. METRO

Police warning. Women at risk with release of sex offender in Winnipeg: Cops

Winnipeg women could be at risk of sexual violence with the release of a serial sex offender on Monday, the Manitoba Integrated High Risk Sex Offender Unit has warned. Luigi Deangelis, 45, was released from Stony Mountain Institution after serving 18 months for breaching a long-term supervision order, and is expected to settle in Winnipeg. Deangelis's crimes involved attacks on adult women strangers, and his offence history includes convictions for sexual assault, criminal harassment, indecent phone calls, committing an indecent act and possession of a prohibited weapon. If you have information about Deangelis, call police at 984-1888. METRO

Search for Dorothy comes to Winnipeg

No place like home. Talent-show auditions reveal 'beautiful singers'

The basement of The Fairmont felt more like Oz on Monday as 37 Dorothy hopefuls practiced their renditions of Over the Rainbow for a chance to be on the CBC's latest talent show.

Ruth Rietze, 17, said she heard about the auditions through her drama teacher about two weeks ago and practiced hard until she got sick last week. But after taking a short rest she was back at it, singing beautifully near a pop machine.

"I love performing onstage," said Rietze, who lives in the West End. "It'd be exciting to watch yourself on TV."

Jana Morrison, 19, said she's been doing musical theatre her entire life and called The Wizard of Oz a "timeless musical."

"Something like this doesn't come along often," said the Maples resident, who dressed the part in a light blue-grey skirt and matching bow in her hair.

Rietze and Morrison said they'd like to put their own twist on Dorothy, and not be too much like star Judy Garland. "You always have to be yourself," Morrison added.

Over the Rainbow finalists will compete to be Dorothy in the upcoming Andrew Lloyd Webber production of The Wizard of Oz at Toronto's Ed Mirvish Theatre.

Stephanie Gorin, casting director for both Over the Rainbow and The Wizard of Oz, said by late Monday afternoon, about half of the 37 girls had auditioned and five "golden tickets" to the next level in Toronto had been handed out.

"We had some beautiful singers here," Gorin said, adding that producers are looking for a combination of personality, dance, voice and "also how well they act the story and their spirit."

Gorin said some of the auditions were emotional. "They cry and I cry at the same time," she said. "It's such a big deal to them."

Over the Rainbow will be shown on CBC in September, while The Wizard of Oz is set to open in December.

Habitat for Humanity. Group marks milestone in Memorial Park

Volunteers with Habitat for Humanity Manitoba raise the first wall on a home being built in Memorial Park. BERNICE PONTANILLA/METRO

Habitat for Humanity Manitoba is celebrating 25 years with a home build in Memorial Park, across from the Manitoba Legislature. Once the house is near completion, it will be transported to its permanent location on McCalman Avenue in Elmwood.

Shannon and Rene Van De Keere couldn't be happier to have their future home showcased at Memorial Park.

"It's unbelievable," Shannon Van De Keere said after a press conference attended by dignitaries and volunteers. "It's the most amazing thing anyone has ever done for us, the ability to own our home."

Both Premier Greg Selinger and Mayor Sam Katz put on work boots and hard hats for the press conference, which included a ceremonial wall raise.

Selinger said that for 25 years Habitat has allowed "people with modest means to become homeowners," and he looks forward to more Habitat builds.

Katz said the type of affordable housing Habitat provides is "what we need in this city and in this province."

By the end of the year, board chair Chuck Golfman said since 1987, Habitat for Humanity Manitoba will have built 231 homes, 26 of them outside Winnipeg.

Homeowners are required to put in 500 hours of "sweat equity" and must still pay off a mortgage, though Habitat's plans require no down payment and are interest-free.

Five hundred sites go black in objection to omnibus budget bill

Protest. Fighting 'deeply troubling' C-38, detractor says one third of bill looks to short-circuit environmental laws

GRAHAM LANKTREE
Metro in Ottawa

Some 500 organizations blacked out their websites in a day of protest against government omnibus budget bill C-38 and its clampdown on environmental charities doing advocacy work.

"Bill C-38 is reflective of a deeply troubling pattern to silence voices talking about environmental issues," said Alex Neve, Secretary General for Amnesty International Canada, flanked by representatives from the Sierra Club and Environmental Defence.

Replacing the Canadian Environmental Assessment Act, the bill brings in new rules for environmental charities that advocate for better laws and policies, limiting how much advocacy work those groups can do. The law can also override National Energy Board decisions and will speed up the environmental review process by reducing the number of studies conducted and shut citizen groups from environmental reviews for pipelines.

Quoted

"The government did not run with the gutting of the Environmental Assessment Act and the Fisheries act as part of it's platform."

Rick Smith, executive director, Environmental Defence.

Rick Smith, executive director of Environmental Defence said that one third of the bill looks at short-circuiting environmental laws.

The bill will cut the number of environmental advisers working in the government and will scuttle the National Round Table on the Environment and the Economy, which had been releasing documents on how Canada could cope with climate change.

"Today, hundreds of organizations and individuals are speaking out in support of two core Canadian values: the protection of nature and democratic discussion," said scientist and activist Dr. David Suzuki. "These values are the foundation of the peace, order and good government that define our nation, yet they are threatened by the federal government's omnibus budget bill, C-38."

The action was led by the David Suzuki Foundation, Ecojustice, Greenpeace, the Pembina Institute and Sierra Club Canada.

Man turns himself in over deadly Toronto mall shooting

The deadly weekend shooting rampage at the landmark Eaton Centre was not likely gang-related, Toronto police said Monday.

Christopher Husbands, 23, of Toronto, turned himself in early Monday and faces one count of first-degree murder and six counts of attempted murder, said Det. Sgt. Brian Borg, the lead investigator in the case.

Husbands is known to police and at the time of the shooting, was under house arrest for a previous charge, Borg revealed at a news conference.

There are indications that Husbands and the 24-year-old man who died in Saturday's shooting, who police have said was believed to have gang ties, knew each other, Borg added.

Regardless, Borg said, "I do not believe that this is a gang-motivated homicide. I believe there's personal aspects involved."

The shooting at the shopping centre also left six people wounded and a pregnant woman needed hospital treatment after she was trampled.

Two people remain in hospital, including a 13-year-old boy from Port Hope, Ont. Connor Stevenson was enjoying an afternoon going to a movie with his mom and older sister when they got caught up in the bloody food court mayhem.

Stevenson was in fair condition Monday, said a spokeswoman with Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children, who also released a statement from the boy's parents.

"After complicated neurosurgery, we are happy to say that he is doing well, all things considered; he is alert and talking," the statement said. "It will be a long healing process, but we are optimistic that he will recover."

Toronto Mayor Rob Ford, who also spoke at the news conference, said he believes Toronto to be the "safest city in the world" and encouraged people to visit and enjoy the hotels, attractions and restaurants it offers.

The terrible crime was an "isolated incident" and does not reflect on daily life in the city, Ford said.

Police are not looking for any further suspects, but Borg said despite the quick arrest, the investigation is not finished and anyone with information is urged to come forward.

The Eaton Centre reopened Monday with a spokeswoman saying they want to resume normal business operations as quickly as possible. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Crime. Granddad upset over killer mom's sentence

Jim McConnell thinks the lives of his two young grandsons are worth more than the sentence their mother has received for drowning the boys in a bathtub.

His former daughter-in-law, Allyson McConnell, was sentenced Monday to six years in prison. But she faces 15 months in custody because Justice Michelle Crighton gave McConnell double credit for the time she has already spent in a mental hospital. She'll be eligible for early release in 10 months.

McConnell, who is originally from Australia, drowned the boys in the family home in Millet, just south of Edmonton, two years ago when she was severely depressed, suicidal and possibly affected by alcohol and prescription drugs.

Jim McConnell stood outside the courtroom and angrily questioned the judge's decision. "This is ridiculous. What's going to stop people from going to kill kids now?" he said. His wife and son, McConnell's former husband, sat in the hallway wiping away tears.

Nigeria. Mother cradling infant amid the bodies found after jetliner crash

Emergency crews wearing masks to protect them from the acrid smoke and the stench of the dead searched for bodies in a shattered neighbourhood near the airport Monday after the crash of a jetliner killed all 153 people on board and an unknown number on the ground.

Apartment buildings, small businesses and roadside shops were smashed to bricks and rubble Sunday when the Dana Air MD-83 plowed into the area about nine kilometres short of Lagos' Murtala Muhammed International Airport.

By nightfall, searchers with police dogs recovered 137 bodies, including those of a mother cradling an infant, according to Nigeria's National Emergency Management Agency. Rescuers acknowledged they still didn't know how many people died in the wrecked apartments and smaller tin-roofed buildings along the narrow streets of Iju-Ishaga. "The fear is that since it happened in a residential area, there may have been many people killed," said a federal emergency management spokesman. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Facebook. Site testing kid-friendly access

Though Facebook bans children under 13, millions of them have profiles on the site by lying about their age.

The company is now testing ways to allow those kids to participate without needing to lie. This would likely be under parental supervision, such as by connecting children's accounts to their parents' accounts.

Such information collection is central to Facebook. Every photo or status update a kid posts on Facebook could count as information collection. Many companies consider the parental-consent requirement too burdensome, so they simply ban all children under 13 instead.

There are an estimated 7.5 million kids under 13 on Facebook, out of more than 900 million users worldwide.

In a statement, Facebook noted that many recent reports have highlighted "just how difficult it is to enforce age restrictions on the Internet, especially when parents want their children to access online content and services."

Few details are available on the nature of Facebook's tests, which The Wall Street Journal reported on in Monday's editions.

The report comes just two weeks after Facebook began trading stock as a public company.

Air Canada shareholders OK airline's executive pay plan

Looking low-cost. Company still focusing on discount carrier at annual meeting

Air Canada's top executive says the launch of a new low-cost carrier remains a top priority for the airline, as it grapples to make profound changes to the way it does business.

"We need to participate in this segment of the market in one manner or another," Air Canada chief executive Calin Rovinescu said Monday in a speech to shareholders.

He said Air Canada is sensitive to the views of its pilots and wants to make sure that whatever time frame it takes with the low-cost carrier is consistent with the discussions of the arbitration process set up by the federal government.

The pilots are one of two major labour groups at Air Canada without a collective agreement. The other union is the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, which represents repair and ramp crews.

Both disputes will be resolved by a mediator ordered by the federal government, which brought in back-to-work legislation after Air Canada locked out the pilots and the Machinists announced they would go on strike. Shareholders overwhelmingly approved a new policy on executive compensation while Air Canada pilots held an information picket outside the downtown hotel.

The largely symbolic resolution passed with 91.85 per cent approval.

The main opposition came from Air Canada Pilots Association president Paul Strachan.

He argued giving double-digit compensation increases to top executives while extolling austerity to employees is hypocritical. Pay for Air Canada's CEO fell 12 per cent last year but payouts of the airline's other four highest-pad top executives soared even though continued losses drove the airline's share price down more than 70 per cent.

Jury selection starts for Baldwin vs. Costner suit

Jury selection began Monday in a legal fight between two Hollywood stars over investments in a device used to try to clean up BP's 2010 oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico.

In his lawsuit, actor Stephen Baldwin claims Kevin Costner and a business partner duped Baldwin and a friend out of their share of an $18-million deal for BP to buy oil-separating centrifuges after the April 2010 spill.

U.S. District Judge Martin L.C. Feldman told prospective jurors they could not be influenced by the celebrity status of Baldwin and Costner.

Feldman asked the potential jurors whether the entertainers' on-screen portrayals compromised the ability to deliver an objective verdict. No one in the pool said they would feel influenced.

Baldwin and his friend, Spyridon Contogouris, said they didn't know about the deal when they agreed to sell their shares of Ocean Therapy Solutions, a company that marketed the centrifuges to BP, for $1.4 million and $500,000, respectively.

BP ordered 32 of the centrifuges and deployed a few of the devices on a barge in June 2010. BP capped its blown-out Macondo well the following month and kept more oil from leaking until the well was permanently sealed in September 2010.

Baldwin and Contogouris claim they were deliberately excluded from a June 8 meeting between Costner, his business partner Patrick Smith and BP executive Doug Suttles, who agreed to make an $18 million deposit on a $52 million order for the 32 devices, according to the lawsuit.

Economy. Feds would respond in crisis: Flaherty

Ottawa would move to backstop the Canadian economy if the European crisis triggers a second global financial shock, Finance Minister Jim Flaherty said Monday.

With economic conditions deteriorating in most parts of the world, and especially in Europe, Flaherty told reporters that the major advantage Canada has over many others is room to act.

"Our situation is imperfect but it's better," he told reporters.

Flaherty said he will discuss the worsening economic climate with his Group of Seven colleagues in a conference call Tuesday morning, but made it clear he considers the situation grave.

Global markets have fallen sharply in the past few days as news coming out of Europe worsened, with Spain joining Greece on the crisis watch list.

SURVIVING YOUR BEST FRIEND'S WEDDING

SHE SAYS...
Jessica Napier
metronews.ca/shesays

It is officially wedding season. Both the time of year and my mid-to-late-twenty-something status mean that my once barren mailbox is now overflowing with invitations, save-the-dates and thank-you cards from betrothed friends and family members.

As spring rolls into summer, bridal banter seems to be at the top of the agenda at every social gathering. Everyone I know is attending, participating or initiating a wedding in the coming months. In fact, I am taking my inaugural run at being a bridesmaid this upcoming weekend.

Historically, bridesmaids and groomsmen have some interesting origins. Once upon a time, Roman law required that each wedding involve 10 witnesses dressed in similar clothing. The superstitious rationale behind this tradition was that the co-ordinating men and women would confuse any evil spirits present at the wedding and make it difficult to identify the actual bride and groom.

Bridesmaid 101

Wedding-minutia madness can make a completely rational person relatively bonkers. A friend you've seen shrug off a pregnancy scare or an email breakup will freak out over finding the correct Pantone shade of lavender or choosing between a serif versus sans serif invitation font.

Today, modern bridesmaids' duties are a bit more demanding than posing in matching gowns to ward off bad luck. Beyond simply assisting with wedding logistics and emotional support, you must also be a personal assistant, stylist, shrink, floral design technician, corset lacer, eyelash gluer, cake icing consultant and so on.

Saying yes to the bridesmaid dress is a very big deal. It can be a rewarding honour to stand beside your friend on her big day, but you shouldn't make a commitment without understanding what you're getting yourself into. Some friends will get married on weekdays, out of province or internationally; they'll want multiple ceremonies, elaborate engagement parties, three separate bridal showers and week-long bachelorette getaways.

I know what you're thinking, oh that won't happen to me; my friends are just so easygoing. But be warned, even your chilled out bestie might have an inner bridezilla lurking inside of her.

Wedding-minutia madness can make a completely rational person relatively bonkers. A friend you've seen shrug off a pregnancy scare or an email breakup will freak out over finding the correct Pantone shade of lavender or choosing between a serif versus sans serif invitation font.

As a bridesmaid, you might be expected to fork over hundreds if not thousands of dollars on plane tickets, hotel rooms, outfits and alterations, gifts, hair, makeup, nails, and other items all in an effort to recreate the bride-to-be's Pinterest wedding vision board.

On the big day, your laborious bridesmaid experience will culminate in 24 hours of stressful jubilation. You'll smile gracefully at the photographer, in that pre-selected shade of lilac lipstick that you'll never wear again, because you are truly happy for your friend and because in just a few hours, it'll all be over.

Starz says goodbye to Spartacus

Starz network says it is ending its highly successful Spartacus saga next season. In an unusual move announced Monday, Starz will conclude this action-adventure series while it's still a big hit, and after logging only three seasons (or four, counting a "prequel" season). This season the series drew six million viewers, an enormous number for a paid subscription channel. Creator and executive producer Steven S. DeKnight promises a "stunningly epic" final season. That 10-episode cycle, which will kick off next January, is currently filming in New Zealand. The series stars Liam McIntyre as the Thracian-slave-turned-revolutionary who's out to topple the Roman Empire. McIntyre took over the role from Andy Whitfield, who starred the first season, then withdrew due to illness. He died of cancer in September 2011.

Cosmopolis.
On the eve of the film's opening, the talent assemble in Toronto to talk about making a Cronenberg flick

scene@metronews.ca

Last year Robert Pattinson, Paul Giamatti and homegrown stars Emily Hampshire, Sarah Gadon and Kevin Durand gathered in Toronto to shoot Cosmopolis, a dark drama for director David Cronenberg.

On Monday the cast reunited with their director for a press conference I hosted at a downtown Toronto hotel in advance of the movie opening in theatres on Friday.

The tone of the conference was light, and the camaraderie of the cast obvious. Here are some of the highlights:

"I don't know what I was more excited about," said Hampshire, "having David bend over me and show Robert how to get a prostate exam, or Rob bending over me and getting one."

Quoted

"I don't know what I was more excited about — having David (Cronenberg) bend over me and show Robert how to get a prostate exam, or Rob bending over me and getting one."
Actress Emily Hampshire on one of her favourite Cosmopolis scenes.

"You don't have to choose," quipped Cronenberg.

Cronenberg also offered up some tongue-in-cheek advice for filmmakers. "I use a little Apple program called iDirector. A little green light goes on if it is OK, or a red light if you need to do another take. It's pretty straightforward. You can all use it."

Later the director commented on why he wanted his actors to speak the lines of the script exactly as written. "I don't want the actors to be screenwriters," he said, they're not designed for that."

"There were no rewrites," Pattinson chimes in.

"Normally that is the first thing you think about as an actor. And you are so used to just changing it the whole time, on every single movie, that with this, once you suddenly got to the idea that you are not changing anything, the script is fine, it's you that are the problem, at least you knew one thing."

Pattinson has a tour-de-force scene at the end of the film, a 22-page two-hander opposite Oscar nominee Paul Giamatti. The Sideways star took a quick break from shooting Rock of Ages in Miami to appear in Cosmopolis.

"Fortunately the other movie wasn't terribly demanding on me," Giamatti joked. "It was a musical that I was doing and I didn't have to sing or dance. I just had to show up and crack jokes."

"I was panicked about it," he says of his quick turnaround in Toronto.

"This thing was intimidating. The length and the language. So I bothered everyone on the other movie to read this thing with me. Fortunately Malin Ackerman made a great Rob Pattinson.

"She was fantastic. I was very disappointed when actually I got here and it was Rob."

John Carter

Director. Andrew Stanton

Stars. Taylor Kitsch, Lynn Collins, Willem Dafoe

Disney's sci-fi fantasy bomb cost somewhere between a squillion and a bajillion dollars to make and sell. So where did all that loot go? The screenplay by writer/director Andrew Stanton (Finding Nemo, WALL-E) and co-writers Mark Andrews and Michael Chabon is far too faithful to Burroughs' ancient babble, while at the same time being deaf to modern interests. Such things as humour, thrills and genuine jeopardy are seriously lacking here. John Carter, a peace-loving space traveller from the Wild West (played by Canada's Taylor Kitsch), is smothered by CGI and bad dialogue as he journeys from Civil War-era Arizona to Mars, here called Barsoom. On this red planet, the Tharks are at odds with each other and apparently at war with the bloodthirsty Zodangans. And what of the Heliumites? Will peacenik Carter stay and fight? John Carter shares more with a Dr. Seuss cartoon than it does with any self-respecting live-action interstellar adventure.

Safe House

Director. Daniel Espinosa

Stars. Denzel Washington, Ryan Reynolds, Robert Patick

Rogue ex-CIA agent Tobin Frost (Denzel Washington), lectures to rookie sleuth Matt Weston (Ryan Reynolds) that spies need to "take advantage of people's desires to believe, to trust." I know the feeling. With a cast this promising — Brendan Gleeson, Vera Farmiga and Sam Shepard are included — and potential alchemy between the two leads, I was hoping for this chase thriller from director Daniel Espinosa to be more than an homage to the Bourne franchise and to Tony Scott films. Consider me suckered. Safe House starts off well enough, but script problems soon have the film sagging, as the characters played by Washington and Reynolds rarely get to match wits or fists.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

That's the way it is: Kate had to hear it, but Celine had to holler it

THE WORD
Monica Weymouth
scene@metronews.ca

Back in March, Kate Winslet admitted that she, like the rest of us, becomes physically sick upon hearing the opening chords of Titanic's theme song My Heart Will Go On.

"I just have to sit there, you know, kind of straight-faced with a massive internal eye roll," she told MTV News, adding that the song made her "feel like throwing up."

Now, Celine Dion is empathizing with her — although very diplomatically, considering the chart-topper essentially let her take a decade-long vacation from the real world and its relentless department store playlists.

"My Heart Will Go On gave me the opportunity to be associated with a classic that will live forever.

If I just count how many times I've sung it, maybe it'll get me sick," she said on the Today Show yesterday. "If she feels tired just hearing it, and, like, throwing up, I'm glad she was not the one singing it."

As much as we want to enjoy this, the sad, dejected echo of her signature chest thump is getting in the way.

Adele on Awards: First I would like to Spanx...

The usually press-shy Adele sat down with Matt Lauer for an interview, during which she admitted that she was a bit worried about her appearance at this year's Grammy Awards.

"I had three or four pairs of Spanx on that night but I loved it," she said, laughing. "I actually had another dress made and I ended up passed out in it. It had a corset and I was like, 'I can't wear that,' so I ended up wearing this instead." Adele admits, though, that when it came time to perform on the Grammy stage, "I took a couple of pairs off."

Sadder than The Notebook: Gosling ain't single

Looks like those breakup rumours can be put to rest, as Ryan Gosling and Eva Mendes have been going everywhere together. After being spotted in New York last month, the pair were out and about in L.A. Friday running errands before heading to the airport Saturday for a flight to Montreal, according to People magazine. The pair have been dating for nearly a year.

Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie have reportedly found themselves in a bit of a stinky situation with their rented London home, as the sewers on the posh street where they are staying have been backing up, according to the Sun. It forced the famous couple to consider moving to a hotel for a break timed to the Queen's Jubilee over the weekend. "Since their drains started playing up, the smell in and around their house has become unbearable," a source says.

SNOW WHITE GETS SERIOUS

In her new film Snow White and The Huntsman, Twilight actress Kristen Stewart plays a dark and violent version of the classic fairy tale heroine. She's up for a sword fight, knows how to throw a punch and lead an army of men to fight her enemies. But off screen she also had to conquer a long-term personal issue.

STEWART FACES FEAR AND SADDLES UP

ROMINA McGUINNESS
romina.mcguinness@metro.lu

Kristen Stewart isn't scared of blood sucking vampires or monstrous werewolves. She's not even put off by drinking her own blood. But there is one thing she is scared of ... horses. As a youngster she broke and dislocated her elbow falling off a horse and has been reluctant to get back in the saddle ever since. But much to Stewart's dismay, her Snow White character in Snow White and the Huntsman is no damsel in distress and spends most of the film on horse back as she escapes the clutches of the Evil Queen. Metro spoke to Sam Dent, Stewart's horse riding instructor, to find out how she finally overcame her fear of falling.

Overcoming fear

"I could tell she was nervous from day one. But that's only natural for someone scarred by a bad fall to let their nerves get the best of them, but there isn't much you can actually do to help other than reassure them," Dent tells Metro.

Large team

The number of horses galloping behind Kristen Stewart during one of the fight scenes in Snow White and the Huntsman.

Taking the reins

Horse riding is an exercise in itself and you'll need to be fighting fit if you're going to give it your all ... and not fall off the horse. As an exercise, the effort required to remain seated in an upright position has both cardio and toning benefits, especially in the gallop. But unlike most sports, you're not in control. "The horse — a very powerful creature — is," says Dent. "If they don't want to do something, you need to be physically and mentally strong to handle them."

Lucky for Dent, Stewart was a keen learner

"Kristen was fully concentrated on conquering her fears. Her and Rusty, her horse (they got on great, by the way) would start by spending 15 to 20 minutes in the enclosed arena. Once she got comfortable, we would go into canter (a three time gait with the horse placing one leg, then two together and then the remaining leg on the ground) in the open field. It's funny because when she was on her horse, her nerves didn't show and she never did anything reckless. She was listening and acting like she was confident, even though she wasn't."

Being a Bare devil

Another challenge for Stewart was learning how to ride bareback — that is, without a saddle. Removing the saddle is a risk, as it requires the rider to exert a higher level of balance and coordination in order to remain on the horse. The absence of a supporting tree and padding between the rider's seat bones and the horse's spine means it's not exactly the most comfortable riding style. "Bareback riding is very fatiguing as you no longer have the saddle to keep you steady" adds Dent.

Thankfully, Stewart was fit enough to cope, thanks to her stunt training with the 'boys,' co-stars Chris Hemsworth, Sam Claflin and co.

Quoted

"When Stewart's horse, Rusty, did something unexpected, she would tell him off and be like 'dude, you can't do that to me!'"

Sam Dent
Stewart's horse riding instructor

What did Dent think of her pupil's overall performance?

"Kristen was completely knackered by the end of filming as she had taken up so much extra work physically. The actual riding she did was pretty basic but she's a good rider."

But what about the Huntsman's riding skills? We know Chris Hemsworth has the advantage of an action hero past, but did this help him ride a horse?

"Chris was a natural. I just needed to bring him back up to speed because even though he'd ridden before, his style was a little too 'cowboy-ish.' I had to straighten him up a bit," reveals Dent. Want to know a fun fact? Hemsworth's horse was called Pinocchio. Not what you'd expect a hunter's horse to be called, but cute.

Beauty pick

Try this if you want fairy-tale-glowing skin

"Massaging your skin every night with firm circular movements using the tips of your fingers will give it an instant glow. Start at the neck and work your way up the face, then around the eyes. Half a minute is enough to boost blood circulation and oxygen to the surface of the skin."

Modern bistro has feel of neighbourhood hangout

Asparagus melt with broccoli and cheese soup. SVJETLANA MLINAREVIC

food@metronews.ca

Last Wednesday, I ventured into River Heights in need of some window-shopping therapy and stumbled upon Saucers Café. This quaint little eatery was full of diners and had the look of a modern bistro but the feel of a neighbourhood hangout.

Being a beautiful day I decided to dine on the patio and soak up the sun.

After perusing the delicious menu, I finally decided on the Asparagus Melt with a side order of broccoli and cheese soup ($12) and a refreshing pear iced tea ($3).

The melt was an open-faced sandwich consisting of crispy ciabatta bread with a pesto mayonnaise, topped by tender asparagus, smoky ham and fresh sliced tomatoes, atop of which was a blanket of melted provolone.

It was good but a touch too salty for me and I didn't get enough of a hit of pesto in the mayo. The soup was loaded with broccoli and the gooey goodness of cheese.

This eatery was quite enjoyable and I highly recommend the patio.

Peach Chicken Sauté.
This easy one-skillet meal is ready in minutes

Ingredients

- 15 ml (1 tbsp) vegetable oil
- 1/2 large onion, thinly sliced
- 1 clove minced garlic
- 4 boneless, skinless chicken breasts
- 1 can (398 ml/14 oz) cling peach slices
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) maple syrup
- 250 ml (1 cup) snow peas
- 1 small red or green pepper, thinly sliced

1. In a large skillet, heat vegetable oil over medium heat. Add onion and garlic and cook, stirring occasionally, for 2 minutes. Add chicken breasts and cook for 3 to 4 minutes on each side until browned.

2. Meanwhile, drain juice or light syrup from peaches into a measuring cup. Add to skillet along with maple syrup and stir, scraping up any brown bits from the bottom of the pan. Add peach slices, snow peas and red pepper. Cover pan with lid and cook for about 5 minutes, until chicken is cooked through.

Easy Puttanesca Sauce.
Try this classic Italian sauce over any pasta

Ingredients

- 8 oz sliced bacon or pancetta, cut into small pieces
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 anchovy fillets, minced
- 1 large onion, diced
- 1 red bell pepper, chopped
- 1 green bell pepper, chopped
- 1/2 tsp each dried oregano, basil and thyme leaves
- 1/4 tsp red pepper flakes
- 1 can (28 oz) crushed tomatoes
- 1/2 cup Kalamata olives, pitted and chopped
- 1 tbsp chopped capers
- 2 tbsp balsamic vinegar
- 1/4 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
- Salt and ground black pepper

1. In a large saucepan over medium-high heat, sauté the bacon, garlic, anchovies, onion, red and green peppers, oregano, basil, thyme and red pepper flakes for about 10 minutes or until the bacon is cooked and the onion is tender.

2. Add the tomatoes, olives and capers; bring to a simmer. Let simmer for about 10 minutes for flavours to meld. Stir in the Parmesan and balsamic vinegar, then season with salt and pepper to taste.

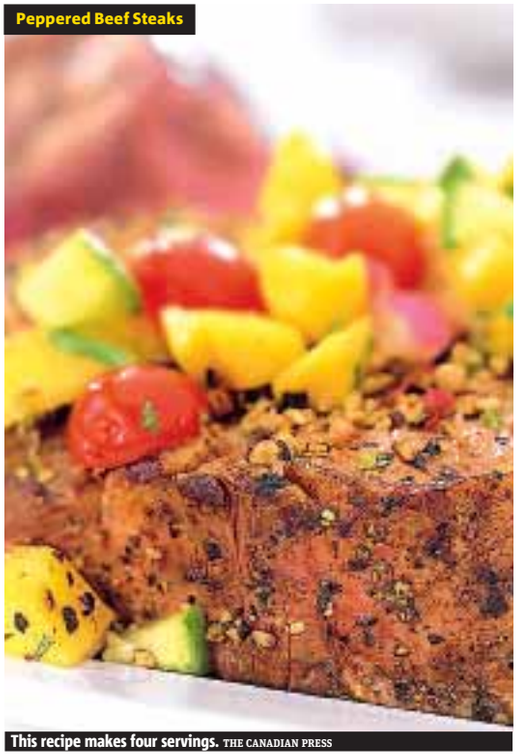
Give your grilled steak some pizzazz with this fruity salsa

Peppered Beef Steaks



This recipe makes four servings. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Top peppered beef steaks with caramelized onions and fruit salsa for a sensational grilling choice this spring and summer.

The salsa makes good use of fruits and vegetables that are readily available in spring. Frozen diced mango works just as well as fresh.

1. Caramelized onions: Dice enough red onion to measure 50 ml (1/4 cup); set aside, reserving for salsa. Cut remaining onions in half and brush with olive oil. Place on grill over medium heat, turning occasionally, for 20 minutes or until tender. Transfer onions to a medium bowl. With kitchen shears, cut into large chunks; stir in brown sugar, balsamic vinegar, salt and pepper. Set aside.

2. Fruit salsa: In a medium bowl, combine reserved diced red onion, tomatoes, mango, cucumber, cilantro, lime peel, juice and pulp; season with salt and pepper and refrigerate. (Salsa may be made several hours in advance.)

3. Season medallions with salt and cracked black pepper (5 ml/1 tsp pepper for a medium-spiced steak). Place on a greased grill over medium-high heat; cook, turning once, for 5 to 6 minutes per side for medium-rare doneness.

4. Serve with fruit salsa and warm caramelized onions.

THE CANADIAN PRESS/ CANADA BEEF INC.

Ingredients

- 2 red onions
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) each olive oil, packed brown sugar and balsamic vinegar
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) each grape tomatoes, halved, or 2 plum tomatoes, diced
- 1 ripe mango, peeled and diced
- 75 ml (1/3 cup) diced English cucumber
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) chopped fresh cilantro
- 1/2 lime (grated peel, juice and pulp)
- 4 rib-eye grilling medallions or tenderloin grilling steaks, 2.5 cm (1 inch) thick
- Salt and cracked (very coarsely ground) black pepper, to taste

Wanted: Youth to win $1,000 scholarships

Financial literacy. A mutual fund company is offering young adults the chance to learn about investing, and fattening their wallets

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca
Twitter: @alisononmoney

There's no lack of summer activities for teens and young adults but here's a summer project I'd like to add to their list. And it comes with a carrot attached — ten $1,000 scholarships. That's worth giving up a bit of gaming, TV or chat time to enter.

The annual scholarships are provided by Brandes Investment Partners, a mutual fund company, (brandesscholarship.ca) for those 16-22 years old – entry deadline is July 20.

The warm-up is a financial personality quiz called The Money Factor. Though I'm a tad past the age of 22 I took it and discovered I'm on the boring side financially.

The quiz takes about five minutes and I scored higher as a Saver than a Spender, I'm slightly more of a Risk Avoider than a Risk Taker and my financial interest ranks on the high side, a good thing considering my job.

The quiz is fun and quite interesting with youth-friendly questions about coin tosses and what to do with found money. At the end you're encouraged to apply for one of the ten scholarships. But it's not just easy money because applicants have to submit a 250-word essay about their money personality and three things learned from the quiz.

What I particularly like about the Brandes initiative is that it tilts toward investing. The focus on money education these days tends to be about debt, credit, saving and spending — important arrows in everyone's financial quiver.

But I believe knowledge about investing is the real key to financial freedom and independence, especially for today's youth who won't enjoy the same safety net of past generations.

As well, employees are increasingly being handed the reins to their workplace pension programs and being asked to make decisions without having a clue about what they are doing. Most employees don't know anything about the investments in these plans, never mind fees charged and risk levels.

When our youth becomes investment savvy those of us who are little older will have one less worry on our plate.

Alison's money rule

"Teaching our youth about investing is as important as lessons on debt and credit."

Who's thinking ahead?

- 43%. Percentage of Canadians 18 to 34 that have an RRSP.
- 16%. Percentage of Canadians 18 to 34 that contributed the maximum to their RRSP in 2012, down from 33% in 2011.

On their own: Investing is key for today's youth as they won't enjoy the same safety net as their parents. ISTOCK IMAGES

What's a poor boy to do?

Chivalry. Dating when you're cash strapped

SARA DIMERMAN
life@metronews.ca

You would think that in today's liberated world, men wouldn't be expected to pay for every dinner or coffee date. Despite evolution amongst the sexes, my bet is that if you were to take a poll, most women would say that they expect to be treated — on the first few dates, for sure. They'd probably say that if their date suggested splitting the bill, that he was either cheap or not into her.

Gone are the days that women stayed at home to raise kids and men were the breadwinners. Today most women, young and older, work as many hours as men and some even earn more than the opposite sex. So, why then do women expect to be treated? Perhaps this is our last ditch attempt to hold onto a thread of chivalry. Most women (especially those younger) aren't offended if their dates don't walk on the side closest to the street or open her car door first. In fact, many prefer to be equal partners. But often not in the finance department.

So, what's a poor boy to do? What if he's working in a retail department store for minimum wage, paying rent and car insurance and barely has enough money left for groceries? What if he's widowed, living on a fixed income and careful about what he spends? Does this mean that he's destined to sit at home with only the television as a companion? What if he's a really good catch in so many other ways? Doesn't he deserve a chance at love too?

Sure he does, but sorry to say men, fair or no fair, chances are that you're going to have to go through your piggy bank for some loonies and toonies — even if it's just to meet a prospective mate over coffee. Because no matter how liberated women are, men are still expected to take the lead when it comes to handing over the loot on a first, and maybe even second or third date.

Here are some tips (not the money kind), for both gents and ladies:

FOR THE GENTS:
Speak up

If you're legitimately cash strapped, then speak up. Timing is key though. I'd suggest not sharing your financial position prior to the first date, because no matter how kind and caring she is, this may be a turn off. She might even suggest you find a better job, or a job period.

Wait until the end of your first, or if you can afford it — second date, and then let her know the truth. Share that you are in between jobs, living on a fixed income, having to pay child support or whatever the truth is, and ask how she feels about occasionally (or always) going dutch on your dates. Let her know that you not dining and dazzling her with expensive dates has nothing to do with how you're feeling towards her, but rather related to your financial position.

Even though this may be all the money he has, he could still be a good guy. ISTOCK

FOR THE LADIES:
Listen with concern

If he has the courage to tell you the truth, acknowledge what he's saying and share how you feel. If you are used to being dined and dazzled, let him know this and share whether you are interested in continuing seeing him under the circumstances.

If he's a really great guy, despite being cash strapped, consider whether his financial position is all important. Is financial success and independence high on your priority list? Are you willing to pay your own way in order to continue seeing him? Do you make more than enough to support both of you?

Would you like to suggest occasionally paying for him too?

FOR THE GENTS:
What to do if she backs off

If you're an older gentleman back on the dating scene, many women your age who have been part of more traditional relationships, may be uncomfortable with paying their own way. They may even see you as being ungentlemanly. Recognize that your proposal may be different to what she is used to.

Try to communicate and compromise further if you fear losing her. If she's backing off for other reasons, then perhaps she's not the right mate for you.

FOR THE LADIES:
If you suspect he's not telling the truth

If he talks about buying a new car and going with his pals to Vegas in the same breath as sharing being on a fixed income, you may be less sensitive to his plight. Call him on it. Perhaps you are concerned about where he places his priorities.

NHL. Quick leads Los Angeles to shutout over Devils to take 3-0 series lead in final

The Los Angeles Kings are on the verge of greatness. It's only going to take one more win for them to be crowned Stanley Cup champions for the first time.

On a night when Wayne Gretzky dropped the puck on a ceremonial faceoff, the Kings moved one step closer to joining The Great One's 1988 Edmonton Oilers as the most dominant NHL champions in history.

Jonathan Quick continued his otherworldly play Monday by stopping all 22 shots he faced as Los Angeles drove a dagger through the hearts of the New Jersey Devils with a 4-0 victory. The Kings hold a 3-0 series lead for a fourth time this post-season.

Game 3

Kings	Devils

It appears as though the Devils share something in common with each of the Kings previous three opponents — they have no answer for Quick, who looks like a slam dunk selection to win the Conn Smythe Trophy as playoff MVP.

The goaltender was particularly sharp in the first period, when the score was still 0-0 and the Devils enjoyed a 5-on-3 advantage for 59 seconds. He got his pad on a dangerous chance from Ilya Kovalchuk to keep New Jersey from getting its first real burst of momentum in the series.

MLB. Astros take Puerto Rican Correa No. 1 in draft

The Houston Astros selected 17-year-old shortstop Carlos Correa with the No. 1 pick in the baseball draft Monday night, making him the highest selection ever to come from Puerto Rico.

Correa has an incredibly strong arm and terrific instincts defensively, and the Astros might have found their shortstop of the future. He bested catcher Ramon Castro, who went No. 17 to Houston in 1994, as the highest-drafted Puerto Rican player.

"This means a lot," said Correa, in attendance at the draft site at MLB Network studios in Secaucus, N.J. "We've got a lot of good players there."

Soccer. Opponents may have found counter for Spain

Opponents may have figured out how to counter Spain's formula for success that proved so effective at recent tournaments.

In its last warm-up before the European Championship, Spain's 1-0 victory over China on Sunday displayed all of the World Cup champions' virtues: possession, slick passing and intricate combinations. But it also highlighted the notable absences of David Villa and Carles Puyol.

The Spanish defence was lucky to escape without conceding a goal after several lapses, and its wealth of midfield talent can be rendered ineffective without a striker capable of converting numerous chances. Fernando Torres and Alvaro Negredo failed to score, a concern going into Sunday's Euro 2012 opener against Italy, a more formidable opponent.

Running back Simpson makes good impression

CFL. Blue Bombers coach LaPolice considers athletic back for kick return role

Chad Simpson is getting noticed and not just because he won't take off his helmet and visor during interviews.

First, there's the 26-year-old import running back's speed that impresses the coaching staff of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

There has been talk of using him as a kick returner but right now no doors are closed as players compete for jobs in training camp.

"When you're athletic and explosive like he is, it makes for a very good day," said head coach Paul LaPolice.

If that's where the Bombers see him, that's just fine with Simpson, who handled the same chore for the Indianapolis Colts of the NFL.

"I'll be returning balls for as long as I'm playing football, if I'm fortunate to win the starting job," said the Miami native, after a steamy practice Monday that likely made him feel more at home.

"I want to just be guaranteed to let me battle for that spot every year because I love to return kicks and punts."

Simpson packs 216 pounds of compact muscle onto a five-foot-nine frame and LaPolice said he isn't just fast, he also shows football smarts.

"A lot of guys have good athletic ability . . . On top of that, he doesn't make many mistakes and he asks the right questions and he knows what he's talking about.

"I had a talk with him about it and he said, 'When you play for Peyton Manning, you get yelled at a lot when (you) don't know what you're doing."'

If the CFL is a bit of an anticlimax after going to the Superbowl, Simpson is far too professional or polite to let it show.

"Whatever opportunity I get I'm going to be happy with. Whether I stay here and play for 12 years or go back to the NFL, I mean I just want to play football."

While he says he's still getting used to the Canadian game, one thing Simpson said he likes about it is the wider field.

"You got that long corner, a guy can't just take an angle, he really has to run after you, he really has to be fast."

Lastly, there is that helmet and visor thing.

He declined a request from a local TV crew to remove it and explained it as a one-time tribute to another of his heroes, former NFL running back Ricky Williams.

Williams played the 2006 season with the CFL's Toronto Argonauts when under suspension south of the border. He was known for doing interviews with helmet and full tinted visor.

"That's my favourite running back, just paying him respect. He was here and I grew up watching him and I just wanted to do that for him, one time."

Super Bowl appearance

- Simpson played with the Indianapolis Colts for a couple of seasons, including the 2009-10 Super Bowl, which Peyton Manning and the favoured Colts lost to the New Orleans Saints.
- The Colts let Simpson go that April and although he was picked up by the Buffalo Bills and then the Washington Redskins, neither club kept him. The Bombers signed him in January.

Horoscope

Aries | March 21 - April 20. Get out and about and see and be seen. This is one of the best times of the year for travel and social activities, and it's not a bad time for romance either.

Taurus | April 21 - May 21. You are no doubt incredibly busy at the moment but there are more important things than work going on in your world.

Gemini | May 22 - June 20. While a new relationship may be exciting the planets warn it is unlikely to stand the test of time, so don't allow yourself to get too emotionally involved.

Cancer | June 21 - July 22. You will behave in an excessive way and if there is someone you have admired from afar you may not be able to keep your feelings a secret.

Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Before You won't have to do much to get yourself noticed today: heads will turn as you walk down the street.

Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. You will act out of character today and some people may think you have taken leave of your senses. Maybe you have, but what of it?

Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. At some point today you will realize that nothing ever really happens by chance, that all experiences — both positive and negative — are designed to help you reach your potential.

Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. Something unusual will happen today. it will be exciting and it will be the kind of thing you want to happen again.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21. How can you improve a relationship? To start with you could try being more forgiving.

Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan 20. What is your purpose? If you don't know the answer to that question you must make it your mission to find out over the next few days.

Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb 18. Don't worry about tomorrow and the struggles it might bring, think only of the day ahead and the joys you are free to experience.

Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20. Sit back and let the world entertain you today. Both at home and at work people will go out of their way to bring a smile to your face.
